From Leghorne we have an Account, that by Letters from Algiers it was confirmed, that the Algerine Squadron had put to Sea, in order to join the Ottoman Fleet in the Dardanelle: They add, that the Turks were ſtoring Magazines at ſeveral Places on the Coaſts of Barbary, for ſupplying their Fleet as Occaſion may require.

Turin, March 10, N. S. On the 7th Inſtant about Nine a Clock at Night the Princeſs Royal of Piedmont was ſafely delivered of a Prince, who was ſoon after baptized, the Marquiſs de la Pierre being Proxy for the Prince of Sultzbach as Godfather, and the Princeſs de la Ciſterna for Madame Royale as Godmother; and he was named Victor Amedée Theodore. Her Royal Highneſs was taken very ill that Night, and continued ſo bad, that ſhe was not judged to be out of Danger till Yeſterday. To-Day Te Deum is to be ſung, and Orders are given for Illuminations to be made throughout the City this and the three following Nights; and extraordinary Rejoycings will be made at Court on this joyful Occaſion. His Sardinian Majeſty and the Prince Royal have ſent Letters, to be delivered to the King of Great Britain, by the Marquiſs de Cortanſe, his Sardinian Majeſty's Miniſter reſiding at London, notifying the Birth of the young Prince. The Count de Maffey is appointed to go with like Letters of Notification to the Court of France; and the Chevalier de Villetre, his Sardinian Majeſty's Maſter of the Horſe, ſets out To-morrow for Sultzbach, on the ſame Occaſion.

Cambray, March 11, *N.
